

Industry Recovery and Resilience Officer Program

The Industry Recovery and Resilience Officer (IRRO) program helps impacted primary producers recovering from the impacts of the 2021-2022 flooding and cyclone events in southern, central, southeast and western Queensland.

QFF's IRROs, Julia Jurgs and Eloise Cosgrove can support eligible primary producers to develop a Flood Management Plan to build resilience and identify strategies to mitigate the impacts of flood as a business risk for your farm. Visit www.qff.org.au/projects/irro for more information.

Benefits of completing a Flood Management Plan

A Flood Management Plan (FMP):

- is specific to your property and business and identifies clear flood recovery and risk mitigation strategies to undertake, and when to implement them
- establishes 'flood specific' documentation to be added to your Farm Business Resilience Plan
- will assist in communicating to your staff members the processes that need to be undertaken before, during and after a flooding event
- assists with identifying long-term goals for your business while also adapting your property and business to potential flood risks
- provides key contacts in case of a flooding event
- identifies areas of improvement for your property such as soil health and infrastructure

Primary Producer Flood Management Planning Grants now available!

Eligible primary producers can now access up to $7,500 via a rebate to offset the cost of eligible technical advice associated with developing a flood management plan.

Primary producers can access the Primary Producer Flood Management Planning Grants by working with an Industry Resilience and Recovery Officer (IRRO) to prepare a plan and identify technical advice to contribute to improved flood mitigation activities. The current closing date for rebates is 30 September 2024.
